Purpose: To seek key inputs from the industry and understand the latest industry trends from industry experts.

About the topic:

Key Points Discussed:

1. Encouraging Interdisciplinary Collaboration:

There's a strong recommendation from the industry expert to foster collaboration among different departments within the institute. Encouraging students to engage in interdisciplinary projects was emphasized to promote diverse skill sets and holistic problem-solving approaches.

2. Long-term Project Duration:

It was proposed that projects span a duration of more than five years to facilitate continuity and depth in research or development. The suggestion involves a handover process from one batch of students to the next to ensure the seamless progression of work.

3. Continuous Aspiration Review:

It was agreed upon that student's aspirations should be identified and nurtured from the second semester onwards. Regular reviews, preferably each semester, will be conducted to align student's aspirations with suitable opportunities for Higher Studies, Entrepreneurship, or Placement.

4. Emphasis on Practical Learning:

The curriculum will prioritize practical, scenario-based learning methods to enhance students' application-oriented skills and problem-solving abilities.

5. Community-Based Learning Initiatives:

Initiatives to integrate community-based learning into the curriculum were proposed to foster a sense of social responsibility and practical application of knowledge in real-world contexts.

6. Service vs. Product Focus:

Discussions centred on making the curriculum flexible and generic to encompass both service and product-oriented approaches, allowing students to grasp broader industry perspectives.

7. Inter-Department Technical Clubs:

The establishment of inter-departmental technical clubs was suggested to encourage collaboration and skill-sharing among students across different disciplines.

 Opp: Art of Living Bangalore - 560 082.

8. End-to-End Application Development:

A recommendation was made to include modules focusing on end-to-end application development to provide students with comprehensive insights into the development lifecycle.

9. Integration of Machine Learning in Enterprise Applications:

There was a consensus to introduce modules demonstrating the practical applications of Machine Learning in enterprise contexts to equip students with relevant skills.

10. Training in Diverse Tools:

Students receive training in a variety of tools offered by different vendors, including but not limited to Power BI, Tableau, Scala, and PySpark, to broaden their skill sets and adaptability to industry demands.

11. Cognitive Services Integration:

The incorporation of cognitive services into the curriculum was proposed to expose students to advanced technologies and their applications.

12. Database Development for DSATM Representation:

A suggestion was made to build a comprehensive database representing DSATM to facilitate learning and research within the institute.

13. Exploring the freely available cloud platform:

Explore the boundless opportunities in cloud platforms for Machine Learning and specialized fields like security by enrolling in the complimentary tiers offered by Microsoft, Amazon, and Data Bricks. This initiative allows students to delve into distinct departments and unearth the unique potentials these platforms hold.

Action Items:

1. Institute Policy Revision:

The administration will review and consider updating institute policies to promote and incentivize interdisciplinary collaboration among students. This will involve incorporating guidelines that encourage multi-departmental project proposals.

2. Project Duration Strategy:

A working group will be formed to explore the feasibility and implementation strategies for projects extending beyond five years. The focus will be on devising a structured handover mechanism between student batches to ensure the smooth continuation of work.

3. Student Engagement and Support:

The faculty and administrative team will work on initiatives to encourage student participation and interest in interdisciplinary projects. This will involve workshops, mentorship programs, and resource allocation to support such initiatives.

4. Monitoring and Evaluation:

Regular evaluations will be conducted to assess the progress, challenges, and effectiveness of these long-term interdisciplinary projects. A monitoring framework will be developed to track the handover process and overall project continuity.

5. Technical Club Formation:

Initiate the creation of inter-departmental technical clubs to promote collaboration and knowledge sharing among students.

6. Tool Training Programs:

Organize training programs or workshops to familiarize students with tools from various vendors such as Power BI, Tableau, Scala, and PySpark

7. Database Development Task Force:

Form a task force responsible for creating and maintaining a comprehensive database representing DSATM for educational purposes

Next Steps:

The action items outlined above will be addressed in subsequent meetings. The administration will communicate progress and updates to all stakeholders involved.

The industry expert's insights have provided valuable direction for enhancing the institute's academic landscape. Encouraging interdisciplinary collaboration and fostering long-term projects among students are integral steps toward holistic skill development and impactful research outcomes. The collective efforts of all stakeholders will be pivotal in implementing these recommendations effectively. This helps to revamp the curriculum and provide enhance opportunities for student's holistic development

Preferably Measurable outcomes:

- 1) Ability to connect with interdisciplinary departments and form a project group.
- 2) Initiate and plan a long-term project for students.
- 3) Form policies for handing over projects from one batch to another batch.
- 4) Create a Project repository in GitHub with proper access control

Impact of the feedback from CCF-1: Students have initiated the development of their portfolios on GitHub, undertaking the upkeep of their projects and ensuring well-formatted code. Additionally, they have opened accounts on platforms like HackerRank and HackerOne, actively engaging in diverse challenges. The Impact analysis was made as shown below:
